MEMORANDUM FOR THE RECORD

SUBJECT : Proposed Prepaid Legal Plan

On 29 November 1977 a meeting on a proposal for prepaid legal insurance for Agency employees was held between [redacted] (Office of Security), [redacted] (Office of Personnel) and two non-Agency Attorneys - [redacted] (representing the prepaid legal plan). Representatives from [redacted] were also invited but were unable to attend. This meeting was arranged as a result of a letter from [redacted] to the Acting Director of Personnel, [redacted] requesting the opportunity to meet with Agency representatives and to answer questions regarding their prepaid legal proposal. [redacted] has also been in contact with [redacted] and Anthony Laphan of the Office of General Counsel.

[redacted] explained the provisions of their prepaid legal plan (please see attachment) and answered questions regarding same. The major point is that this plan would provide prepaid legal service for members, legal spouse and dependent children of the member, within the local District of Columbia, Maryland and Virginia jurisdictions. [redacted] advised that a minimum of 200 employees must participate and that an annual premium of $120 per member would be charged. Members would be required to sign a membership contract for one year. They advised that experience with other similar plans found that a ratio of 1 lawyer for each 1500 members was satisfactory to provide this legal assistance. [redacted] spoke of his 14 month experience as the attorney for a prepaid legal insurance program for the Fairfax County Police. However, this policy only covered members (not spouse and dependent children) and provided coverage only during their official duty hours. The cost of this plan was $1 per month for members. When questioned about what type contract would be provided to participants, they advised that a letter outlining the benefits [no contract] and identifying attorney contacts in each of the 3 jurisdictions [including bail bondsmen] would be sent to each enrollee. Of interest to [redacted] was the administration of such a program. [redacted]

[redacted] were advised that the Agency does not automatically have people available to handle the mechanics [enrollment, collection of premiums, follow-up actions, etc.] of such a proposal. They responded that it was likely they could be responsible for the administration, handling it with additional personnel within their law office and without an increase in the $120 yearly premium. [redacted] used the term "check-off" [payroll deduction] when discussing collection of premiums. He was advised that it is also unlikely that our payroll system could [or is even authorized] make payroll deductions for such a program. This did not seem to bother [redacted] as he was willing to include collection of premium as part of his administrative responsibility.

When questioned on the specific types of legal coverage (attachment) and methods for dealing with volume requests for assistance, [redacted] displayed several forms covering the most frequently requested legal questions. On the basis of a telephone request these screening/information forms would be mailed to the enrollee for completion and return to the attorney. By supplying this information on the form one or more visits with the attorney would be eliminated and both attorney and members time will be saved. Based on a review of these forms the attorney would be able to provide legal guidance, prepare letters, or request a meeting with the member. The use of this form system and the 6 free hours of legal advice (attachment) make the concept of a prepaid legal plan seem worthwhile.

The question of an employee enrolled in this plan bringing suit against the Agency was raised and [redacted] replied that if there was merit to a particular charge, this plan would provide legal assistance to the employee.

He also advised that the plan would provide assistance to enrolled members who were called before congressional or other official committees. However, the plan would not assist one member in bringing suit against another member.

The Security representatives advised that the Agency would require participating lawyers to be cleared and that background checks would be performed on clerical/administrative personnel associated with the plan. The question of cover and the participating of employees under cover in such a plan received only brief mention as there was no cover representatives present. In addition to questions of security, the obvious cover questions appear to be the key consideration to the viability of a prepaid legal plan for Agency employees.
